Principal's Desk

The year 2020 began with the news of the spread of SARS corona virus from one place of the world to another. Eventually that had brought the entire world to a kind of standstill because of the lockdown. Food supplies were disrupted and the business tumbled. Fortunately, the pandemic did not become devastating, thanks to the quick measures taken by the governments and the people at large.

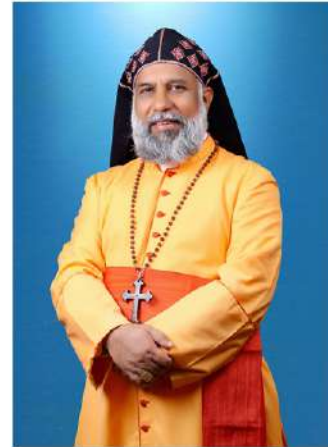

One thing is very evident now; our life has reached a new normal, as everybody comments! Nature has given us an opportunity to evaluate the utility of the communication technology to use it to the fullest extent. Education is one area of life, which would have been affected, to the worst, had there been no means for online classes. Now, we find that our teaching community, across the world, from Nursery to the top level, work tirelessly so that others will succeed and they impact the lives of those they mentor in positive ways that last throughout their careers. We are also given the chance to find new ways to teach the subjects, which we thought would never become amenable to the virtual mode of teaching. We find that we need more labour and creativity in developing the contents suitable for online delivery for many educational programmes for making learning effective. This opens up avenues for new research in education technology. Let us hope that the new line of thinking prompted by the pandemic be creating more equitable and cost effective mechanisms for the universalization and globalization of education. Let that also make people to think that knowledge is a resource to be shared for the well-being of humanity and not anything to be capitalized or monopolized.

Wish you a HAPPY & PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR!
